Mall of discounts

Paytm Mall, the newest entrant in e-commerce, has set its sights on $10 billion in revenue by March. But the question is not whether it will reach its goal, but how it will do so

YUVRAJ MALIK
Bengaluru, 2 January

Paytm Mall may have been a late entrant in the country's e-commerce market but it has instantly made a splash, carving out a niche for itself in the midst of a broader transformation in the industry.

Carved out of parent One97 Communication — mobile wallet Paytm's parent firm — and launched as a separate business unit in February 2017, it is now the putative number three in the industry after Amazon and Flipkart.

In 2018, sales for Paytm Mall grew over 100 per cent over the previous year, according to multiple analysts. Company filings show revenue of ₹775 crore in the financial year 2017-18, up from ₹136.6 crore the year before, when it recorded only two months of business.

All this growth has come even as the e-commerce market moved towards a duopoly dominated by Amazon and Flipkart, at the expense of smaller players like Shopclues and Snapdeal.

"It's been a great year for us — the business grew in all respects," says Amit Sinha, chief operating officer at Paytm Mall.

Of course, many things are going for Paytm Mall. It has the backing of Paytm's 200-million-strong user base and deep pocket to begin with. Paytm contributed 800 personnel, including top executives, and investors old and new have pumped in $650 million into the new unit so far. This money fuelled the massive discounts and cash-back offers, a highlight of its initial period when it took in new user at a break-neck pace.

But while there has been break-away growth, challenges remain around its unique business model and a viable long-term strategy to compete against Amazon and Flipkart, which together hold 76 per cent of the market.

Sinha, however, says Paytm Mall is on solid ground because its growth has been driven by users rather than GMV, or gross merchandise value, the widely accepted measure of growth in the industry.

"Our growth has been higher in terms of users as compared to the growth in GMV. We are early in our life cycle, so our focus has been on growing transactions," Sinha told Business Standard in an interview.

Sinha did not disclose the sales numbers or customers the platform serviced, but maintained that Paytm Mall was on target to achieve an annualised sales of $10 billion (approximately ₹70,000 crore at Wednesday's exchange rate) by March 2019. Paytm Mall may be on course to achieve this target, but what is of concern is how it will choose to reach this point — not whether it will, say analysts.

"Paytm reminds me of Snapdeal in its early days when it was known for offers and deals. It's a simple model — utilise the massive funding from VCs to power deals and discounts in the hope that customers who come in will stay on," says Karthik Srinivasan, a digital strategy consultant.

"Deals and discounts, however, do attract customers, but to stick to a store, customers look beyond deals — service, predictable delivery, range of options, after sales, including returns and so on. These are not something that Paytm Mall is known for at this point."

As things are, he says, Paytm is paying customers to buy products from its online store. "Even in their offline-to-online model powered by QR codes, the reason a customer opts for them even when she is shopping offline is the extra value they seem to be getting in the form of upgrade in flight tickets, cash-backs and so on."

"In essence, Paytm (Mall) is quite literally paying customers to buy from their online store. That doesn't seem like a sound business strategy, but for a company that is so incredibly funded, this may seem like something they can keep on doing for quite some time," Srinivasan adds.

Unlike Amazon India and Flipkart, Paytm Mall does not operate large warehouses or logistic operations, (uses only third-party services) and boasts a wide network of kirana stores and regional suppliers on its platform.

Being asset light, "we are more capital efficient than anybody else," Sinha says. But with the platform relying solely on partners for packaging, fulfilment and delivery, it runs the risk of trading off quality for a simpler business model, multiple analysts point out.

But it does have its strengths. It has brand recall in non-metros and its revenue across product categories is more widely spread. Paytm Mall gained early traction by offering the best price on high-selling items like Apple Macbooks and iPhones. However, its category split is, in fact, better than others. Its reliance on mobile phones, a category that typically makes for 50 per cent of sales on any other platform, is only 35 per cent, RedSeer Consulting data shows.

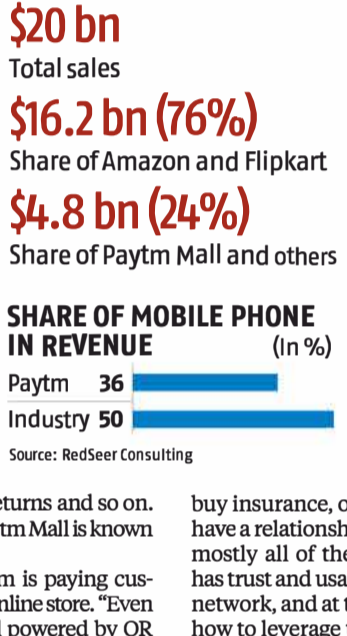

Sinha says categories like grocery, fashion, electronics are picking up as well. The company is reportedly in talks with Future Group to buy a larger stake in Future Retail, the operator of Big Bazaar and More supermarket chains. If the deals go through — Amazon is also reportedly a bidder in the negotiations — it'll give Paytm Mall a sizeable supplier network where the Future Group supermarkets may serve as its stock keeping and fulfilment units.

The Paytm group's core strengths are its formidable network, a wide array of services all the way from travel booking to mobile recharge to wealth management services, and an enduring acceptance in tier II, tier III and even smaller regions.

A user who may come in for one service may get introduced to another, and may get hooked to a third one. That's the network effect it is hoping to bank on, says Pinakiranjan Mishra, partner and national leader for retail and consumer products at EY.

"They have a relationship with the consumer because they are one platform where you can pay telephone bill, buy insurance, or movie tickets. Similarly, they have a relationship with the trader, or retailer, as mostly all of them have Paytm enabled. So it has trust and usability on both sides. That's their network, and at this point, they are figuring out how to leverage this network," says Mishra.

NASA space probe 'phones home' in landmark mission to solar system's edge

REUTERS
2 January

NASA's New Horizons explorers successfully "phoned home" on Tuesday after a journey to the most distant world ever explored by humankind, a frozen rock at the edge of the solar system that scientists hope will uncover secrets to its creation.

The nuclear-powered space probe has travelled 4 billion miles (6.4 billion km) to come within 2,200 miles (3,540 km) of Ultima Thule, an apparently peanut-shaped, 20-mile-long (32-km-long) space rock in the uncharted heart of the Kuiper Belt. The belt is a ring of icy celestial bodies just outside Neptune's orbit.

Engineers at Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Maryland cheered when the spacecraft's first signals came through the National Aeronautics and Space Agency's Deep

New Horizons embarked on a journey towards the solar system's edge in 2006 to study the dwarf planet Pluto and its five moons

Space Network at 10:28am. "We have a healthy spacecraft," Mission Operations Manager Alice Bowman declared.

The spacecraft will ping back more detailed images and data from Thule in the coming days, NASA said.

Launched in January 2006, New Horizons embarked on its 4 billion-mile journey toward the solar system's edge to study the dwarf planet Pluto and its five moons.

"Last night, overnight, the United States spacecraft New Horizons conducted the farthest exploration in the history of humankind, and did so spectacularly," New Horizons principal investigator Alan Stern told a news conference at the Johns Hopkins facility in Laurel, Maryland.

An image of Thule, sent overnight and barely more detailed than previous images, deepens the mystery of whether Thule is a single rock shaped like an asymmetrical peanut or actually two rocks orbiting each other, "blurred together because of their proximity," Stern said.

During a 2015 fly-by, the probe found Pluto to be slightly larger than previously thought.

Shri G. Venkateswara Rao, Deputy General Manager (Mineral Processing) was awarded doctorate by JNTU College of Engineering, Hyderabad for his thesis "Studies on Process Feasibility and Production of Pellet grade concentrate from Sub Grade Iron ore". The research was guided and supervised by Prof. R. Markandeya, Principal, JNTU College of Engineering, Manthani, Kareem Nagar District.

All the research work was carried out at Research and Development Centre, NMDC Limited located at Habsiguda which is recognized as "Centre of Excellence" by UNIDO in the field of Mineral Processing. In this research Sub Grade Iron ore of 40.80% Fe, 40.90% SiO<sub>2</sub> was up graded by beneficiation using Gravity separation (Spiral concentrators) and Enhanced Gravity separation (Multi Gravity Separation) methods. A final concentrate of more than 65% Fe, 3-4% SiO<sub>2</sub> could be produced with a recovery of 32% by weight using spiral concentrator and 38% by using Multi Gravity Separator. This iron ore concentrate will be further used to make pellets to feed to Blast Furnace to make Pig Iron / Hot metal which will be further used to make steel. More than 15 research articles were published by Shri G. Venkateswara Rao in National and International Journals and more than 35 article in National and International Conferences / Seminars / Workshops in this area.

Chairman SAIL emphasizes Safety and V priorities for the New Year

Steel Authority of India Limited (SAIL), the largest Public Sector Steel Company, celebrated the New Year at a function held at its Corporate Office, New Delhi today. Speaking on the occasion, Chairman, SAIL, Shri Anil Kumar Chaudhary, conveyed his good wishes to the SAIL employees and their families. Recalling the events of the past year, he mentioned that Year 2018 was the turnaround year for the Company in terms of profitability and praised employees for their contribution in various achievements of the Organisation during the Year. Addressing the SAIL Collective, he said that SAIL Plants/Units have to gear up for challenges ahead and take steps befitting the stature of the 'Maharashtra' Company and move it to even greater heights. He emphasized safety, higher volumes, quality and cost reduction as the mantras for sustainable growth. He said that the employees should assume targets in line with Company goals for the New Year and make a steady resolve to achieve the same. He further asked them to embrace new initiatives in the areas of Logistics, IT and Research & Development to move ahead on the path of development.

NINL Posts Record Hot Metal Output

Kalinga Nagar based Neelachal Ispat Nigam Limited ended the last calendar year in a positive note with posting best monthly Hot Metal production of 85090 ton in December 2018 surpassing its previous best of 83690 ton achieved in July last year. Making the year commendable, the company had recorded best monthly, quarterly, half-yearly Hot Metal output subsequent to the capital repair of its Blast Furnace. Shri S.S. Mohanty, Vice-Chairman & MD, NINL, congratulated the teams and asked to continue their committed efforts to take the company to the next level of success. NINL resumed Billet production in December, 2018 by restarting its state-of-the-art Steel Melting Shop which is the second milestone the company has planned for the turnaround of the plant. NINL had achieved the first milestone with the completion of the Blast Furnace and expects to achieve the third milestone with operation of its captive iron ore mines early in the next Financial Year.
