Sensodyne drops the white coat, un.masks a new image

The toothpaste brand from GSK Consumer ditches the old prescriptive advertising routine, as it looks to widen its appeal among young users

TE NARASIMHAN
Chennai, 2 March

For close to a decade, Sensodyne has been pitched as a special toothpaste for sensitive teeth. One that gets inside people's homes, not because it offers a fresh feel or, kills bad breath, but via a doctor's recommendation. A white-coat clad and stethoscope-wielding model has been its face, almost ever since its launch in 2011. Now in a new, digital-first campaign, GSK Consumer is recasting its toothpaste in a new mould, asking people to choose the brand for the love of good food above all else. The objective is to make the brand more relatable, the company said, but will this mean losing the distinctive nature of its appeal?

GSK Consumer Healthcare's oral care brand Sensodyne tackles Dentine Hyper Sensitivity (DHS), a condition about which the company has sought to build awareness and sensitivity. Its efforts have had the brand gain almost half the share (49 per cent) of the sensitive toothpaste market in the country, the company said. There is room for growth within the segment, but even more so outside. Hence experts say it is to tap the potential customer base outside the subset of people with 'sensitive gums' that the brand's core promise is being repurposed.

"The campaign is designed to connect with people who hold back from enjoying their favourite foods, and therefore compromise," says Anurita Chopra, area marketing lead, oral care, GSK Consumer Healthcare. Visually appealing, the ads are built on the premise that the problem of sensitive teeth is more common than one thinks it is.

Titled #ForTheLoveOf, the campaign is based on research done by the company that showed that one in three people suffer from tooth sensitivity in India, but only one in five take any action. As a brand, it has been driving category building and has worked towards bringing about a shift in consumer behaviour and understanding, according to Chopra.

GSK's pharma imagery has worked for Sensodyne in the past (as part of the deal between HUL and GSK, Sensodyne will continue to be owned by latter), but Harish Bijoor, brand-expert and founder, Harish Bijoor Consults says, "Dental science and dental hygiene accoutrements market today is a highly segmented one. The toothpaste is the lowest common denominator in this arena. And out here, the ordinary toothpaste of the fluoride or gel variety is a competence that is OTC. Sensodyne and its category is a prescriptive oriented category."

Given the unique proposition that Sensodyne has built for itself, is the brand straying afar from its core offering, by adopting a general tone in its communication? The ₹10,400 crore toothpaste market in India is highly penetrated category growing at a steady rate and in the last few years, there has been a fresh momentum duo to Thompson, is a digital first campaign. "This is testimony to the brand's successful strategy in India. We will continue to invest in the brand and its category building initiatives," said Chopra.

The company has launched on-the-ground campaigns with several malls to spread its use among the people. It has also made advances in the market through collaborations with dental health care professionals. The brand has launched variants, expanded into adjacent need spaces through offerings which delivered on sensitivity plus benefits such as Sensodyne Deep Clean, and Sensodyne Multicare. The new campaign marks a fresh attempt to expand the brand's appeal and reach and chart a course in hitherto uncharted waters.

Markets...

"The markets do not know how to react to the corona outbreak; they play the worst-case scenario. If there is no bad news overnight, we could come back tomorrow re-thinking," said Andrew Holland, CEO of Avendus Capital Alternate Strategies.

The news of new corona cases could not have come at a worse time for India, which is reeling under an economic and political crisis. "Every Fortune 500 company, which was reliant on China for the manufacture of its products, will have to diversify its production chain. If our manufacturing states can grab this opportunity, this could be a heaven-sent," said Saurabh Mukherjha, founder of Marcellus Investments.

Barring three, all sectoral indices of the BSE ended the session in the red. Metal as well as oil and gas stocks were the worst-affected, with their respective gauges falling 2 per cent each. Two-third of Sensex components ended with losses. SBI was the worst-performing Sensex stock.

Divestment...

In her 2020-21 Budget, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman also revised downwards the tax revenue and total expenditure estimates for 2019-20, and widened the fiscal deficit target for the year to 3.8 per cent of gross domestic product from 3.3 per cent.

"The IRFC IPO will be done even in this market. Whenever there is a short window of opportunity this month, the IPO will be done. The OFSS are now likely to be done after March 31," said the official. This means they will contribute to the 2020-21 budgeted divestment proceeds of ₹2.1 trillion.

Last week, the Centre had divested 10 per cent of its stake in RITES through OFS. The issuance bombed. "We raised just around ₹400 crore versus expectations of ₹1,000 crore," the official said.

Travel firms...

Expedia said it was laying off 3,000 employees globally, beginning with Hong Kong and Singapore. Emirates and Singapore Airlines, too, have announced cost-cutting.

Singapore Airlines is implementing a 5-15 per cent salary cut for employees, including its CEO and senior management, while Emirates is offering voluntary leave without pay. "There are no last-minute cancellations. Fresh bookings are, however, being postponed. We do not have visibility on business for the April-June period," said the head of a travel company.

Italy is an important destination for Indians. Typically, group tours from India begin from London and end in Rome. "The government has issued an advisory to curb non-essential travel to Italy. As we head towards the peak summer season, we anticipate a drop of 12-15 per cent in bookings," said Sabina Chopra, co-founder, Yatra.com.

A MakeMyTrip spokesperson said: "There has been a definite slowdown in outbound travel bookings. Travellers are being extremely cautious in making foreign travel plans. Our outbound business stands at 20 per cent of the overall business, which includes South East Asia. We do expect a potential impact if the outbreak spreads westwards. We have not seen any noticeable dip in domestic bookings."

Carmakers...

According to Deepak Jain, president of Auto Component Manufacturers' Association, India's auto component industry imported parts worth $17 billion in the financial year 2018-19. Of this, China's share was $4.5 billion.

To be sure, China is ahead of other countries in BS-VI. Most global suppliers have used China to develop those parts as it allowed them to achieve the kind of scale not possible in India or elsewhere, explained Wadhwa. All truck makers saw their dispatches drop more than 45 per cent last month as compared to a year ago as they curtailed dispatches to dealers and remained cautious of stockpiling ahead of the new emission norms coming into effect. Automakers in India count dispatches to dealers as sales. Sanjeev Vasdev, managing director at Flash Electronics, which counts several two-wheeler makers including Bajaj Auto as its key customers, is also worried. "The impact of the coronavirus will be

Channel for...

If anything, the hair-splitting over tastes, textures, and dialects is on another level.

Agarwal highlights some complexities. "Southern markets are at a better stage of evolution than Hindi, on both penetration (of TV) and consumption. In Marathi, Bangla or other languages, there is an overlap with Hindi. Among Marathi audiences, for instance, 70 per cent of the consumption is in Hindi and 30 per cent in Marathi. In Bangla, 45 per cent consumption is in Bengali. The south is predominantly about 'my language'. On the Karnataka border, you might have bilingual consumption in Telugu/Kannada or Marathi/Kannada."

Ravish Kumar, head (regional TV network), Viacom18, points to subtler differences: "Programme tastes in Marathi are more understated and more rooted. In Tamil and Telugu, they could go over the top. Bengali is struggling to find an identity."

This has implications on everything—programming, advertising, and costs. "Earlier, there was lot of homogenisation in regional markets. Now, 80 per cent of the programming is unique to that market; just 20 per cent would be remakes or dubs," says Kumar. "Even the biggest formats—whether KBC or Bigg Boss—are on regional TV. It is about local content with national-level production values," says Vaz.

When regional channels move from 12-13 hours of original content a week to 25 hours, time spent usually doubles or triples, reckons Agarwal. The second difference is the choice of languages. In the nineties, various players had tried Punjabi, Gujarati, and languages with a Hindi overlap. Except for Marathi and Bangla, local content in other languages did not work. In the last five years, many of these genres have shown growth for various reasons. For instance, several local players have seeded the market in Punjabi. In Bhojpuri and Odia, BARC finally has a good sample to generate TV ratings. This in turn brought in advertisers prompting national players to invest in those markets.

Modi to log out.

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi replied to Modi's post, tweeting: "Give up hatred, not social media accounts." To that, Tripura chief minister (CM) Biplab Deb retorted: "So that's the reason (Congress president) Sonia Gandhi doesn't have any social media account?"

Congress spokesperson Randeep Singh Surjewala tweeted: "Earnestly wish you would give this advice to the concerted army of trolls, who abuse-intimidate-badger-threaten others every second in your name!" Amruta Fadnavis, spouse of former Maharashtra CM Devendra Fadnavis, tweeted: "Sometimes it's the smallest decision that can change our life forever! I will follow the path of my leader."
